

Components

The JENCOLOR color sensors detect or measure the color properties of surface colors or active light sources. Interference filters which are directly mounted onto the photodiodes (on chip) ensure stable optical parameters for the long-term, high light yields and robustness against environmental influences. Different protected recipient geometries (honeycomb structure) make diversified application possible.